Charges Pending Against Former Police Officers

The Wasatch County Attorneys office stated that as of this time, Wednesday, charges are pending but as yet have not been filed against former Heber City Police Chief Bobby Nelson and Don Nelson, his brother, who served as animal control officer. They were dismissed with cause by the Heber City Council on Feb. 28, 1985.

The decision to prosecute was not made until the office received confirmation that the Nelson brothers had formally initiated an appeal of their dismissal, according to Hufnagel. Their appeal to Heber City Employees Appeals Board, which was filed by their attorney, Fred Wasilewski, with Heber City Attorney John L. Chidester, on April 12, "neglected our agreement not to prosecute them," said Hufnagel.

In a Feb. 25 agreement between the Nelson brothers and Wasatch County Attorney Joseph E. Tesch, it was stipulated that the Nelsons would not contest or appeal their dismissal by the Heber City Council and, in return, Tesch, would refrain from prosecuting the Nelsons for alleged illegal behavior.

The Nelson brothers were officially dismissed by the Heber City Council on Feb. 28. The council cited numerous allegations of unlawful behavior on the part of the Nelsons, compiled in a six-week investigation by Wasatch County Sheriff, Mike Spanos.

Alleged incidents of illegal activities, according to the Feb. 25 agreement, included "driving while intoxicated, public intoxication, providing alcohol to minors, carrying open containers of alcohol in vehicles and other allegations which might rather broadly be characterized as incidents of contributing to the delinquency of minors, disorderly conduct, and sexually-oriented misbehavior towards young women."

Although the Nelsons maintained their innocence of these allegations, they signed the settlement agreement. Bobby Nelson explained that he and his brother believed that they were going to be fired by the Heber City Council, as the agreement indicated, "and so I thought, why go to court if I'm going to lose my job anyway. What's the use of fighting?"

Nelson said he later learned that the agreement was "an outright lie," because the council had not decided on any action with respect to the Nelsons. That was confirmed by Scott Wright, city councilman, on March 6.

Nelson said that fact "made all the difference in the world to me. I'd have gone to court to fight the dismissal if I thought I had a chance," he said.

Since Nelson believed he was innocent of the allegations, and that he was no longer bound by the Feb. 25 agreement because "the lie" had broken the agreement, he decided to appeal.

On April 19, the Nelson's attorney, Wasilewski, notified Chidester of his client's decision to appeal their dismissal to the city's Employee's Appeals Board.

"I sent a letter to Chidester which asked for a bill of particulars, of specific charges levied against my clients," said Wasilewski. "It was basically a discovery request."

Chidester confirmed that he had received the letter and that "I am now in the process of complying with the request."

City Councilman Wright said that the Heber City Council would appoint five persons to the appeals board. "We created the appeals board about three years ago," said Wright. "But until now we haven't had to use it."
